

GIVES MANSION FOR ART.

Miss M. Carey Thomas Turns Over
Garrett Home in Baltimore.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, June 30.—Miss M. Carey Thomas, the retired President of Bryn Mawr College, to whom the late Miss Mary Garrett willed her $100,000 mansion on Mount Vernon Place, this city, has turned over the spacious residence to the Baltimore Museum of Art.

This gift, announced today by Blanchard Randall, President of the museum, provides assurance that for some years the local art societies will have a home for exhibitions and meetings, and also that the growing permanent collection of the Friends of Art and other art organizations can be hung for public exhibition.

The art societies that will have the use of the home will be the Museum of Art, the Handicraft Club, the Baltimore Water Color Club and the Friends of Art.

The home was built about 75 years ago by John W. Garrett and occupied by members of his family continuously down to the time of Miss Garrett's death. During her life she had embellished the residence with fine teakwood carvings from India, mahogany work and marbles.
